GRETTE NISSEN AND HUSBAND RE-UNITED

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 26.—(UP)—Gretta Nissen, glamorous blonde screen actress, and her husband, Weldon Heyburn, actor, re-plighted their troth today just as a Mexican judge was preparing to sever the ties of matrimony.

"This time the reconciliation is a permanent one," the blue-eyed actress proclaimed. The past was sealed with a kiss and Heyburn murmured, "It'll never happen again."

LIVESTOCK SHOW IS OPENED IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 26.—(UP)—Boys and girls from the farms paraded their choicest cattle, sheep and hogs at the Union stockyards today, opening the 33rd annual international livestock exposition with an eclat befitting the biggest show of its kind ever held in Chicago.

Despite unfavorable prices and surplus production on the farms there were 15,000 fine animals in the 22 acres of display pens, more than entered in any previous exposition. At the hay and grain show, select wheat, corn, hay and other produce was exhibited in greater profusion.

QUARREL OF LOVERS CAUSE OF 2 DEATHS

RENO, Nev., Nov. 24.—(UP)—Quarrel of young lovers today was blamed for the deaths of Barbara Inman, 15, and Otto O. Touchstone, university of Nevada freshman.

Police said Touchstone shot and killed the girl and then committed suicide when she refused to accompany him to a dance last night. The tragedy occurred at the Inman residence, where Touchstone roomed.

PLAN NEW MOVE ON TRUST DEED BILL

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 26.—(UP)—A "compromise plan" on the trust deed initiative defeated at the general election, will be offered at the 1933 legislature, the legislative council bureau announced today.

Sen. W. E. Harper of San Diego asked the council bureau to draw up a bill extending the period of notice for sale under a trust deed from 3 to 4 months, and providing that where property is sold on a trust deed and a deficiency judgment is rendered, the borrower may have a 12-month redemption period, as under mortgage foreclosure.

The defeated initiative gave a 12-month redemption equity without qualifications, and the principal argument against it was that it would force a lawsuit on every trust deed foreclosure.

Ira Copley Declares Banks in Excellent Condition and Trade Picking Up

DEPRESSION IS GOING

Declares in Interview That Country is Building Again on New Basis

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(UP)—The surge of a returning national prosperity already is being felt on the Pacific coast and in the middle-west, Ira C. Copley, publisher of a group of 17 newspapers in the two areas, believes.

"The general morale in the west is better than it is here," he told the United Press. "Banks are in excellent condition, retail business is picking up."

"There still remains certain things to be done—among them a special session of congress—but in six or eight months more people will definitely realize that the depression has been written into history, and that the country is building again on a new basis."

"There's nothing more dangerous than an optimist who hasn't any sense," he added. "Don't write me down as an optimist. But I can look the facts in the face."

"This year's figures show a reduction of $1,715,000,000 in crop values and some people will feel pretty badly. But when you realize that this year's crops are valued at $5,240,000,000—even when sold at the lowest unit price in 75 years—you can figure out for yourself whether this country is in such a bad way."

A country that can produce crops of more than five billion cannot be stopped, Copley said.

"And that figure is the lowest prices will be for the next 50 years," he continued.

"This is my fifth depression. They've all gone the same way, beginning with crazy speculation, coming out with better times. The nation's had a bad blow, but it can stand it and has stood it. The Pacific coast swallowed a reduction of $1,500,000,000 in the value of Transamerica corporation shares; Kreuger a billion; Inland a half a billion; and we're still eating in the United States, even if we do have a headache. That's the kind of country this is."

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 26.—(UP)—The crucial construction period of Hoover dam near Las Vegas, Nev., is near.

E. O. Wattle, director of Six Companies, Inc., builder of the huge project, said today that success of the huge venture will largely depend on developments between now and March 1.

Within that period the Herculean task of diverting the flow of the Colorado river through four diversion tunnels will be attempted. Two large coffer dams—one above and one below—are in process of construction, Wattle said. These dams will divert the water through the tunnels.

FARM LEADERS TO MEET WITH GOV. ROOSEVELT

President-elect Hopes to Jam Legislation Over in Short Session

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 26.—(UP)—President-elect Roosevelt today turned to the task of carrying out his campaign pledge of a "new deal" for the nation's farmers.

Convinced agricultural relief legislation should be jammed through the lame duck session of congress, Roosevelt planned the first of a series of conferences with farm leaders this afternoon to exchange ideas on what advisers feel will be an emergency program.

According to friends, the governor was represented as feeling that something should be done before the next harvest.

What this program will consist of, no one was prepared to say, but it was felt that extension of farm credits would be one of the matters discussed.

The agricultural experts who were to see him include officers of the national grange, headed by Fred Freestone, master of the New York state grange. Next week Roosevelt will go over the farm relief situation with members of the house agricultural committee.

To Receive Guests

The president-elect was to receive his guests in a miniature "White House" deep in the pine-clad hills of Georgia where he is vacationing and taking treatments in the pool of the Warm Springs foundation, an organization devoted to care of infantile paralysis sufferers.

Roosevelt will devote considerable study to the question of recognition of soviet Russia, but purely from an academic standpoint. It is understood.

While he would not comment, it was said he was approaching the recognition matter with an open mind. For the past several months the governor has studied volumes dealing with the economic and governmental theories of the soviet. He also has talked with leaders of American business in an attempt to test their reactions toward the reopening of trade relations with Moscow.

Roosevelt, it was pointed out, would want to study thoroughly all matters pertaining to the Russian situation now in the archives of the state department at Washington. He was said to feel that those documents would have to be digested before any opinion would be reached.

Recognition Foes

Newspapermen asked him whether he had received a telegram signed by the Rev. Edmund Walsh of Georgetown university, William Tyler Page, representative Hamilton Fish, and others requesting that he withhold any commitments on Russian recognition until he had obtained their views. They are all foes of recognition.

BRIDGE WAGE SCALE ANNOUNCED MONDAY

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 26.—(UP)—Wage scales for foundation work on the San Francisco bay bridge will be announced Monday by Earl Les Kelly, director of public works, according to plans laid today.

Kelly conferred with State Highway Engineer C. H. Purcell and representatives of contractors, whose suggested scales were announced as "very close" to the rates proposed by union labor Wednesday.

Whether the bridge should be considered as a special job or as a building activity was one of the chief points of issue between labor and the contractors. If it is regarded as a building activity, building trades wages would be paid, otherwise, the wages would be higher.

JAPANESE EDITOR ATTACKED

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26.—(UP)—Sel Fujii, 50, publisher of the California Japanese Daily News, was attacked and shot in the cheek early today by two assailants who set upon him as he emerged from his downtown office.

At Georgia street receiving hospital, attacks said the bullet had inflicted only a flesh wound but that his other injuries were serious.

Fujii told detectives he believed the attack was provoked by a series of editorials published recently, championing the cause of Japanese ranchers.

Two assailants, whom Fujii believed were Japanese, escaped.

CONFERENCE HELD ON CANAL CONTRACT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—(UP)—Conferees meeting here to draft a contract for the All American Canal development neared the end of their negotiations today. It was expected that a final decision would be reached next week.

The $38,500,000 project, a part of the general Boulder canyon development which includes the giant Hoover dam, is designed to carry water from the Colorado river to Imperial and Coachella valleys in Southern California.

The present negotiations concern use of the water when the project is complete and the drafting of a payment contract under which money spent on the canal by the federal government would be returned by the irrigation districts over a period of years.

MRS. BROWNING IS ARRAIGNED TODAY

MADERA, Nov. 26.—(UP)—Mrs. Margaret Browning, 52, prominent Chowchilla club woman, faced arraignment here today on charges of murder and of performing an illegal operation.

Suspected by county officers of having performed more than 400 criminal operations on women at her ranch home during the past 10 years, Mrs. Browning was indicted earlier in the week after the county grand jury considered amazing evidence assembled by state and county authorities.

Officers hinted that they would ask indictments against others suspected of complicity in the operation of the asserted "death farm."

UNREQUITED LOVE RESULTS IN DEATHS

SANTA MONICA, Nov. 26.—(UP)—Unrequited love was the motive that drove Mort Skilling, 35, to kill his former sweetheart and then end his own life.

The knife-pierced bodies of Skilling and Miss Lois Pittenger, 23, daughter of a local druggist, were found by R. W. Wareham in his home a short time after he had left them alone to "talk things over."

Police said Skilling returned here from El Paso where he had been working, after receiving letters from his sweetheart, stating she was "interested in another man."

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—(UP)—For the first time since 1929 the downturn in railroad earnings was halted during October, according to a check-up of earnings statements, many of which showed increases over October, 1931.

WASHINGTON — Factory payrolls increased during October and industrial production held up to the advances made in August and September, the October survey of the Federal Reserve Board said.

NEW YORK — Production program of automobile companies for December indicates greater activity by the industry than in any month since JUNE, according to Dow, Jones & Co.

CHICAGO — Reports from 2746 industrial establishments in the Seventh Federal Reserve Bank District for October show an increase of 3.1 percent in payrolls, the first aggregate payroll gain since last February, the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago reported.

NEW YORK — For the fourth consecutive month, the Grand Rapids furniture industry in October showed an increase in payrolls over the preceding month, according to the monthly review of Seidman & Seidman, accountants.

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Nov. 26.—(UP)—Notre Dame balanced a mystifying aerial game with a smooth running attack and defeated Army today by the surprising score of 21 to 0.

The gold-helmeted cadets went down under an avalanche of perfectly-executed passes and a hard running attack that kept them almost constantly on the defensive.

In the first half the West Point team stopped the Irish on the 12-yard line and made a gallant rally on Vidal's 36-yard run. But Melnikovich came back in the second period with a 26-yard dash to open a battering Notre Dame attack, ending only when an Irish player fumbled on the three yard line.

A few minutes later, Notre Dame was held for four downs on the four yard line, but the third drive, featured by a long pass and a short heave over the goal line—netted a touchdown.

In the third period the Irish pounded down the field for another score and later set their third tally when Army fumbled on its own goal line.

STANFORD DEFEATED BY PITTSBURGH, 7-0

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 26.—(UP)—The pupil outsmarted the old master here today and "Jock" Sutherland's University of Pittsburgh football team defeated "Pop" Warner's Leland Stanford team from the coast. The score was 7 to 0.

The game was played on a cold, hard field before 45,000 spectators.

At Pitt stadium thousands of fans crowded into the large bowl and Pitt officials expected an attendance of 45,000.

Pitt undefeated in nine games but held even by Nebraska and Ohio State was a 10-3 favorite before game time.

Glenn S. (Pop) Warner made his third eastern appearance as coach of Stanford opposing Jock Sutherland who succeeded him at Pitt in 1924. Sutherland played a guard on Pitt teams in 1915-16-17.

The governor indicated he had not seen the telegram. Before his conference today Roosevelt planned to follow out the schedule he prescribed for himself at Warm Springs. He was to take a vigorous 10 minute swim in the pool and then undergo his exercises under the direction of a physio-therapist.

Most of the members of his party went to Atlanta, where they were luncheon guests of United States Senator John S. Cohen. Congressional leaders with the exception of Speaker John N. Garner, were expected to be daily visitors beginning with the first of the week. One of the first Roosevelt looks for is United States Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas.

Mrs. Roosevelt, her friend, Miss Nancy Cook of Valhalla, N. Y., and Col. Louis McHenry Howe, the governor's political secretary, will leave Warm Springs Sunday by airplane from New York City.

She had been ill since her return from the United States where she was operated upon in June for a brain tumor. Senora Calles was the mother of two sons, Plutarco, one year and 10 months old, and Leonardo Alfonso, nine months.

The demand for flowers and wreaths exhausted the local supply, and prices rose swiftly. Sen. Calles received more than 1000 cables of condolence. He was expected to leave for his winter home at Cuernavaca tomorrow and remain there during the mourning period.

All public offices were closed today.

Santa Ana Man Gets Federal Court Sentence

Arrested several weeks ago by postoffice inspectors from Los Angeles, George H. McKean, formerly of Santa Ana, was sentenced to serve 90 days in jail after having pleaded guilty in federal court, Los Angeles, to charges of having sent obscene matter through the mails. The jail sentence was imposed yesterday after a two-year sentence to McNeil Island prison was suspended.

According to Postmaster T. E. Stephenson of this city McKean was arrested by Los Angeles inspectors and charged with sending sex literature through the mails.

Police News

Andrew Gonzales, 36, of 1819 West Third street, was arrested by Deputy Sheriff L. H. Nicholson yesterday afternoon on a bench warrant for Justice K. E. Morrison's court. The man was lodged in jail.

WILL ROGERS SAYS:

BEVERLY HILLS, Nov. 26. (To the Editor of The Register.) If you think this Democratic victory brought on harmony you just wait till they start to hand out those post-offices down South. There will be more people killed in the rush than in the flood.

Got some real debt information first hand yesterday and not from an editorial. Mr. W. G. McDoo was out to visit me. Incidentally all he did (and that didn't come from him either, it comes from known facts) well all he did was make the next President of the U. S. He says he will absolutely stay in the Senate and accept no Cabinet position, even if offered. Later in the afternoon came out Congressman Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of W. J. She was bred in the purple in politics, and shows it. It was the first Thanksgiving the Democrats have celebrated since B. C. (Before Coolidge.)

Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

RANCHER LOSES $97,000 ROLL IN WINDY CITY

phoned Elmo Thompson, vice-president of the Exchange National bank at Tulsa and learned that Drummond left there three weeks ago with at least $97,000 on his person.

Drummond said he registered at the hotel at 7 a. m. Thursday.

"That evening I went to a restaurant and ate so much turkey that when I got to my room that night I had to take off my money belt which I always wore," the rancher said.

"I laid this out on a little stand used for suitcases and went to sleep. When I woke up the belt and money were gone."

Authorities at Tulsa telegraphed, in answer to a query, that Drummond owns a 35,000-acre ranch in Osage county, that he paid $750,000 for the ranch, that he is married and has an 11-year old daughter, and that it is well known in his county that he frequently carries large sums of money.

The rancher told police he left Oklahoma with the intention of making "a big deal" in Pittsburgh. He said he obtained $10,000 from the Kansas City Fidelity Trust and Savings bank en route and Cleveland.

Police suspected that because it was known that Drummond often carried much money and because he had done so much traveling he might have been swindled instead of robbed. They suggested this to him.

"If that mob got the money, forget it," he answered. "For I'll get it back better than you will."

Questioned further, he recalled that throughout his trip several men had appeared in his vicinity with such regularity that it was possible they were following him.

His brother, Jose, aged 5, was uninjured.

The two automobiles sped on, their occupants presumably unaware of the tragedy.

Mrs. Maria Munoz, the boy's mother, heard the gun battle and came out on the front porch just after Arthur fell. He died in her arms, without regaining consciousness.

The fugitive escaped but his pursuers believed he was wounded. They learned of the child's death after they retraced the course of the chase and saw a crowd collect around the Munoz home.

The officers said they sighted the car several blocks away and recognized it as a stolen machine. The driver responded to their command to halt by stepping on the gas.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG -- News Behind the News --

WASHINGTON By Paul Mallon

BEER

The best impartial idea about how Mr. Hoover stands on Beer comes from a cabinet member.

He says the President does not consider that the presidential election was a mandate on beer. He did think it was a mandate on repeal.

Therefore he favors enactment of a repeal legislation.

He considers most of the beer proposals he has heard as unconstitutional. To enact some of them would be nullification in his view. He would refuse to sign these measures.

He will sign any beer bill which escapes those two classifications.

Congressman Britten was shooting in the dark when he came out of the White House and announced the President would sign a beer bill. Mr. Hoover took the unusual step of authorizing a statement that he had declined to discuss the subject with Britten.

During the last campaign the W. C. T. U. was announcing in New York state that Mr. Hoover would veto a beer bill. No statement has come from the White House yet about that.

OUTLOOK

The best inside expert opinion is that the Federal Reserve index of industrial activity will not drop for November. Steel buying for automobile production is expected to help keep the average up. Textile may slump a little. Meat packing is holding its own.

The 10 per cent gain in September was maintained in October according to final figures. It will be encouraging if the gain continues to hold for November as now seems probable.

AMNESIA

Men upstairs in Washington have been trying with doses involved in the Robins case for a clue.

If you are a good detective you may be able to figure it out for yourself. Here they are:

Sept. 2.—Col. Robins talked with Political Secretary Walter Newton at the White House from New York about an appointment for Sept. 5.

Sept. 3.—Col. Robins disappeared from the City Club, New York, wearing gray suit, leaving baggage behind.

Sept. 5.—Mrs. Robins telephoned the Associated Press in Washington from her Maine home saying her husband had disappeared. She believed him kidnapped by Florida bootleggers. (Same day) Robins seen in same gray suit in Loop, Chicago, by two friends, who insisted they could not be mistaken.

Sept. 13.—Dr. Polling searched in Chicago fruitlessly and left.

Sept. 27.—Dr. Polling christened a stumping plane "Raymond Robins" at Topeka, Kans., with water from well at birthplace of President Hoover; first step on a 21,000 mile tour for the president.

Oct. 1.—About the time Col. Robins arrived in North Carolina from "out key way."

Oct. 6.—Mrs. Robins came to White House.

Oct. 7.—Mrs. Robins conferred two hours with Prohibition Director Woodcock.

Oct. 8.—Mrs. Robins left for Kentucky to visit Col. Robins' brother, a physician at Louisville.

Oct. 17.—Mrs. Robins went to North Carolina at Asheville, near Whittier.

Oct. 22.—A reporter for the St. Petersburg Times quoted servants at the Robins' home as saying the Colonel would return after election.

Nov. 7.—Election.

Nov. 17.—Woodcock's prohibition agents announce discovery of Robins at Whittier, N. C., near Asheville.

A very close friend of Col. Robins believes the Colonel wanted a rest and took it. This friend was one of the last to see Robins before he left.

Another friend—Senator Borah—took a hard backseat after the discovery. Borah thinks Robins suffered a breakdown from overwork. He called the Asheville physician in the case by phone. He wanted to go down to identify Robins. He was informed that was not necessary.

HOPE

If anyone cares now—Mr. Hoover's telegram of congratulations to Gov. Roosevelt on election night was written 45 minutes before it was sent. It lay on the desk of his study awaiting the possibility of better returns which never arrived.

It leaked to one of the press associations 25 minutes before it was dispatched and was actually published before it was on its way to Roosevelt.

NOTES

Dr. Polling's plane was donated by an unnamed friend according to data filed with the clerk of the house. . . . He considered it a private tour not connected with the Allied Forces. . . . It begins to look as if Democratic Floor Leader Robinson is being edged out. . . . At a luncheon of Democratic senators the other day Senator Pat Harrison presided. . . . NEW YORK

By James McMullin

Financial New York is getting more concerned about the international debts as the ideas of December approach. The main desire here is to avoid that horrid word "Debt." It would not be half so bad by any other name. Wall Street realizes that "moratorium" and "postponement" are taboo so far as congress is concerned. It still hopes some formula can be worked out which will leave the door open for further negotiations without offending political sensibilities.

Public statements in favor of re-

ARREST MADE IN OLD HIT AND RUN CASE

Steve Poras, Delhi Mexican, wanted here since July 2, on a charge of failure to stop and render aid after an automobile accident at Seventeenth street and Broadway, was arrested in San Diego last night by the sheriff's office there for Santa Ana police.

He will be returned here tonight, Chief of Police Floyd W. Howard said.

The car Poras was said to have been driving collided with a machine operated by Paul Lopez, who was accompanied by his wife, and small baby. All three were hurt and taken to the Santa Ana Valley hospital.

Poras previously was arrested here on September 20, 1931, on a charge of manslaughter, following the death of Paul Vinkler, at Delhi road and South Main street. Vinkler's motorcycle colliding with the Poras car. Poras was acquitted of the charge after a trial.

Source close to Roosevelt say that he is privately in favor of a policy of leniency and cooperation but will certainly not jeopardize his prestige with congress by going to bat for a losing cause. Any such attempt on his part would be used to embarrass him later and he is well aware of it.

Bankers here understand that England, France and Italy are considering making us a proposition. If they get any encouragement at all—along the lines of the Lausanne agreement—debts to be scaled down to a nominal sum and paid by a bond issue floated in this country and guaranteed jointly by the debtors. New York men of affairs are unlikely to offer encouragement on these lines.

The essence of the situation—as Wall Street sees it—is that you can't pull the hat trick twice but maybe something can be done with mirrors.

COLOMBIA

The European tangle is making things tough for other debtors. Colombia has had a representative here for a month trying to get an official idea of what is going to happen in March, 1933, when she has a bond issue coming due. No one will express any ideas on the subject.

BEARS

Bear stories are being spread from interested quarters detailing the terrible things that will happen if England does pay her December installment. The idea is that the payment would shoot the pound through the cellar and American commodity prices would take it on the chin through England's loss of purchasing power. Wheat, for instance, might drop five cents more.

This propaganda isn't getting very far. Five cents more off the price of wheat isn't much of a scare after what has already happened.

BANKS

Atlee Pomerene did not add to his popularity among the banks with his remarks about "parasites." The banks deny that there is any demand for commercial credit on sound collateral. Also they have interesting figures which they claim prove they have not been shutting down on loans unreasonably.

In October, 1932, loans on other than security collateral by reporting member banks amounted to 9.5 billion dollars and the Irving Fisher commodity price index stood at 86. In October 1932, the same type of loans amounted to 6.1 billion dollars and the commodity index stood at 81. In other words, the banks maintain they are granting as much commercial credit now in terms of purchasing power as they did in 1932.

STERLING

A week ago an important London banking firm recognized as a fiscal agent for the British government converted its considerable sterling balance with New York correspondents into gold bars.

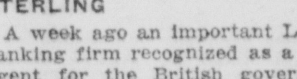

Experts here say this means a preparation for the December 15th payment and shows anticipation of further drop of the pound. The British Lion has been known to catch many a trusting deer by such operations.

GERMANY

New York women are debating the reports that with the approach of a more conservative age the position of the German woman has become worse. Unemployment has increased the trend towards the old German idea that woman's place is in the house and there is now a growing prejudice against women in professions.

Most of the parties on whom the Government intends to lean for support have adopted the idea as a plank and some of them wish to exploit it politically by giving double votes to veterans and married men. The unmarried woman—and since the war there is an excess of them in Germany—is politically discredited, even when she does productive work for the community.

This movement has the approval of the various housewives—associations which are especially powerful in East Prussia. They have recently decided to secede from the League of German Women's associations, maintaining that the League has placed too much emphasis on the needs of unmarried women, that it is too radical in matters pertaining to abortion, and that the League has pacifist tendencies.

BUDGET FOR FARM BUREAU REDUCED

A materially reduced budget for the new fiscal year will be presented to directors of the Orange County Farm Bureau when they meet next Thursday, according to R. D. Flaherty, executive secretary of the organization.

The tentative budget was prepared yesterday by the ways and means committee of the bureau during a conference that continued through the entire afternoon. Adoption of the budget as presented will be urged by members of the ways and means committee.

While the amount of the tentative budget is withheld pending action by the board of directors it has been intimated that the material reduction will exceed 10 per cent of the amount fixed for last year.

The budget adopted at the beginning of the last fiscal year approximated $11,150. On July 1, last, a slash of approximately 10 per cent was made effective cutting down the year's budget to approximately $10,017.

The girl gave her name as Edith Posner of 395 Seventeenth street, San Francisco.

She said she had suffered a lapse of memory just after the supposed kidnapping and was unable to answer officers' questions clearly. An examination was under way to ascertain if she had been drugged.

Though otherwise apparently unharmed, the girl seemed mentally and physically exhausted. Police decided to let her sleep a few hours, in the hope that the rest would restore her flagging memory.

George Arlee, 52, oilworker, of Santa Fe Springs, was booked at the county jail last night by Fullerton police officers on charges of disturbing the peace and resisting an officer.

GIRL IN DAZE IS FOUND BY POLICE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 25.—(UP)—A 20-year-old girl found wandering in a daze along an outlying boulevard today told officers an incoherent story of having been kidnapped from her San Francisco home, then fell into a deep slumber.

Announcement was made this morning of a standard training school for teachers and leaders which is to open Monday evening at the Spurgeon Memorial church. Classes are to be in progress from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m., according to the Rev. C. M. Akers, pastor of the church. The classes are to be continued during the week from Monday to Friday and three courses are to be taught.

Credits obtained at the school will be accepted by other churches as the courses are interdenominational, it is stated. Among the outstanding leaders in Sunday school work who are to act as instructors will be Dr. C. P. Moore, Carpenteria, Calif., former secretary of California Sunday school work, and Mrs. S. M. Cheek of Hollister.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26.—(UP)—Legal aspects of the question to repeal the county's "Little Volstead" ordinance were submitted to the county counsel today for an opinion.

A petition to repeal the ordinance was kicked about in conference yesterday by the board of supervisors who after filling it, later rescinded their order and asked the county counsel for an opinion.

Supervisor Harry M. Braine said he will submit a legal report shortly after which a public hearing probably would be held on the issue.

The county dry ordinance can be repealed either directly by the supervisors or by a popular referendum.

other." Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald said.

"We hope the United States will agree to postponement of the war debt payments," MacDonald said in the first official reference to the present stage of the debt question. "We asked that the date of payment be postponed while there is an opportunity for an exchange of views on the general situation. . . . while war debts are legal obligations, they are tantamount to economic madness."

Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain, speaking at Birmingham, said he appreciated that President Hoover considers the request for further discussion of the debt situation "a reasonable one."

The pronouncements by the two cabinet ministers confirmed the growing impression that postponement would be fought for with characteristic British doggedness. The government will attempt to convince the United States that economic world recovery hangs in the balance.

There was nothing in the remarks of either spokesman to indicate that President Hoover's war debt note dampened in the slightest the official conviction that the United States will concede postponement. On the contrary, the government grasped the opportunity to present a new and detailed case for postponement, to be contained in a note to Washington expected to be dispatched Monday or Tuesday.

This new note was expected to be Britain's trump card in the war debt negotiations. The entire country was intensely interested in the negotiations. King George took an active interest and summoned Sir Robert Vansittart, permanent undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, to Buckingham Palace last evening.

SPECTACLE OF ARGONNE FIGHT ATTRACTS 2000

With guns shooting, rockets flaring and charges and counter charges, the first "Night in the Argonne" being staged at the municipal bowl was witnessed last night by approximately 2000 persons. The show is to be presented again tonight.

Members of the California National Guard, together with American Legion members, appearing as American and German soldiers in battle, give a realistic taste of warfare as it was in France. With bombs crashing in air and very lights illuminating the field, persons in the grand stand are given one thrill after another.

One of the features of the show is the crash of a miniature airplane and its subsequent burning in the heat of the battle. How the artillery played its part in all battles, how the tanks operate and how soldiers with bayonets fixed march into battle is clearly brought out in the mimic warfare.

Some 50 soldiers are used in the battle and the noise at times is terrific, adding a glamor to the spectacle which will be remembered here for a long time.

Mined sections of "no man's land" which explode as the opposing forces battle add greatly to the realism of the event.

Many persons expressed enthusiasm at the entertaining and instructive spectacle and a larger crowd is expected tonight.

TWO DRIVERS, PEDESTRIAN HURT BY AUTOS

Three persons were injured in auto crashes yesterday according to reports filed with authorities. No one was reported seriously hurt.

Wynola Del Meener, 22, of 777 South Stephens street, Fullerton, suffered an injured right leg at 12:40 p. m. yesterday when the car she was driving collided with a truck driven by T. C. Morse, of 1700 S. Broadway. The accident occurred at Seventeenth street and Broadway.

Miss Del Meener was given first aid treatment by B. A. Hershey, sergeant of motorcycle police, who was nearby at the time.

Sancho Yamomola, 49, of Buena Park, suffered a broken leg last night when the car he was driving got out of his control and ran into a ditch on West Commonwealth avenue, near Buena Park, it was learned here today.

The man was taken to a Fullerton hospital.

Edward Cunningham, 11, Santa Ana youth, was run down and slightly injured at Fourth and Main streets yesterday afternoon by a car said to have been driven by W. G. Hitchon, of 740 Arcadia street, Los Angeles, according to a police report.

The youth was given first aid treatment for a bruised leg.

Attempt Made to Break Into Store At Orange Fails

Burglars, last night, attempted to break into the Panfa Products company at West Walnut and North Cypress streets, Orange. The place was entered two months ago at which time a number of brass fittings were reported stolen.

Locks of both the doors of the plant were jimmied at about 8 p. m. Warren Case, night operator at the Orange Ice company, discovered the attempted robbery as he saw from the nearby ice plant, a man working on the locks at the rear door. He frightened the man away and notified Officer Homestead, and James Johnson. According to Carl Pister, one of the owners of the bottling works, no money is kept in the safe.

JUDGE GRANTS FOUR DIVORCE DECREES HERE

Four divorces were granted yesterday in department two, superior court, by Superior Judge James L. Allen.

Mrs. Jesse Henry, Santa Ana practical nurse and housekeeper, was granted a decree from her husband, Osmond Henry, on the grounds of desertion after she testified that her husband left her in July, 1928, after he had returned to the Henry home on Berkeley street in an intoxicated condition and choked her. C. A. Word, of Fullerton, testified, on the occasion described by Mrs. Henry, he brought Henry to his home and that the choking occurred when Mrs. Henry refused to kiss her husband. The Henrys were married in Bakersfield in 1917.

Mrs. June Brooks, comely young Santa Ana woman, formerly of Los Angeles, was divorced from her husband, L. J. Brooks, on her plea of non-support and neglect. She told the court that her husband left her in 1931 for no apparent reason. The Brooks were married in 1925 and, according to her testimony to the court her husband was habitually intoxicated and persisted in gambling.

Mrs. Felipa Yanes was granted a divorce from Tony Yanes on grounds of desertion. She told the court that her husband left her on March 28, 1930. The Yanes were married in April, 1925.

Mrs. Marie Homan was granted a decree from her husband, Fred J. Homan, on a charge of technical desertion. She testified that her husband was of an extremely jealous disposition and had struck her, forcing her to leave the family home. She told the court that she left her husband on one other occasion but had been prevailed upon to return upon her husband's promise to treat her with more consideration. Mrs. Belle Spengler, corroborated Mrs. Homan's testimony as to her husband's jealousy and alleged cruel treatment. The Homanes were married at Riverside in 1924 and separated August 15, 1931.

McKinney, Santa Ana Democrat, defeated for the same office listed his expenditure as totaling $321.77. Homer Hoard, Liberty party candidate for the same office spent $12, according to his statement.

ST. NICK GETS POLICE CHECK WLD WELCOME BURG LARIES FROM CHILDREN WITH PRISONER

Arriving exactly on time, at 11 o'clock this morning, Santa Claus came to Santa Ana.

He was met at the Montgomery Ward and Company's store at Second and Broadway, where he will have his headquarters from now until Christmas, by Mayor Paul Witmer, Chief of Police Floyd W. Howard and Police Commissioner E. G. Warner, and was welcomed to the city.

After pictures of the Mayor and Santa Claus were made, Santa went to the big basement of the store, where he took charge of the toy department. Literally thousands of children, hundreds of them with their parents, jammed the corner and the building prior to the arrival of Santa Claus. The basement, where thousands of toys are on display, was packed. Traffic officers were ordered to Second and Broadway to handle the crowds and at times traffic was jammed for a block in each direction.

The popularity of Santa Claus with the youngsters was attested by their wild break to his car when he drove up in front of the building after parading from the Eddie Martin Airport, where he landed in a big red airplane, piloted by Dale Decker, well known Santa Ana flyer, who brought Santa from the north this morning.

After circling the city, the plane landed and was met at the field by hundreds of other children who could not wait for him to come downtown. They wanted the first glimpse of him.

Santa Claus handed out candy to the children in the basement of the store and will be there with small presents for all who come to see him from now until Christmas time.

M. W. D. CALLS BIDS ON BONDS TO START WORK

Actual commencement of construction of the Colorado river aqueduct moved materially closer with the official call of the directors of the Metropolitan Water district for bids on the first block of aqueduct bonds to be offered for sale. It was announced today by Col. S. H. Finley, Santa Ana's representative on the board, following a meeting in Los Angeles yesterday afternoon.

Bids are asked on a $2,016,000 block of bonds, the sale of which will provide sufficient funds for the financing of the first 60 days of construction. The Reconstruction Finance corporation is expected to bid on the bonds at an interest rate of five per cent, according to Colonel Finley. If other and lower bids are made, the bonds will be sold to the lowest bidder.

It was pointed out that the district is assured of a bid from the R. F. C. on the securities now being advertised. The corporation will pledge several weeks ago to bid on aqueduct bonds up to $40,000,000.

Open Bids Dec. 12
Bids will be opened on December 12. It is estimated that funds can be secured shortly after the middle of December. Money obtained from the bonds will be used to put under way the construction of a field headquarters building at Banning, and a temporary power transmission line which is to run from Colton along the aqueduct route. Contracts for these jobs have already been awarded.

Another step which is to be financed by the pending sale will be the launching of construction of the 13-mile Santa Jacinto tunnel, the most important unit of the entire aqueduct. Bids on this huge job will be opened on November 29, and it is estimated that by December 15 it will be known whether the work will be done by contract or by forces employed directly by the district.

Colonel Finley today estimated that actual construction work on the tunnel will not start until late January or February. No considerable amount of men will be given employment until the construction work is started on the tunnel.

DEFENDANTS IN WATER SUIT FILED BY IRVINE COMPANY SEEK SETTLEMENT CONFERENCE

Preferring peaceful settlement to long-drawn litigation over water rights of the Santa Ana river, representatives of the cities, towns, and water companies of the upper Santa Ana basin, named as defendants in the suit filed recently by the Irvine company, met yesterday and appointed a committee for the purpose of seeking a conference with officials of the plaintiff company.

The committee consists of Francis Cutler, Riverside, chairman; J. A. McGregor, Fontana; J. J. Prendergast, Redlands; Mayor I. N. Gilbert, San Bernardino; D. S. Bell, Riverside; and H. H. Hale, Anaheim.

In its injunction suit filed recently in Federal court, the Irvine company is seeking to restrain the cities of San Bernardino, Riverside, Redlands and individuals from further water spreading and conservation of the upper river, declaring that such a procedure was a menace to its supply distributed among its 50,000 acres of land.

Hearing Set Dec. 7
The committee appointed at yesterday's meeting was instructed to attempt to secure a conference with officials of the Irvine company before hearing on the injunction December 7.

Earlier in the month, the Orange county board of supervisors received a letter from the Tri-County Water Conservation association, signed by Francis Cutler, as president, seeking approval of the Orange county board for the water spreading project now under fire in the Irvine company injunction suit. In asking approval of the Orange county supervisors the letter pointed out that this county need not join in the work so long as it approved the program and made possible use of state funds appropriated for conservation and flood control work in the three counties.

The letter pointed out that this money is in the San Bernardino treasury but cannot be used without the consent of the Orange county supervisors.

Orange county supervisors, acting on the advice of C. A. Elliott, engineer assigned to check and report on the Sondergerger plan of water spreading which is the basis for the project, refused to cooperate in the program when advised that the project was detrimental to this county's water rights and supply, and should be opposed.

In its letter to the supervisors the Tri-County Water association suggested three plans whereby the board could approve the work and release the money. The basis of the principal agreements was that all water rights would be respected as of the date the agreement was signed.

DIRECTOR

The Rev. Michael O'Gorman, diocesan director of the Holy Name society, below will be the guest of honor at the semi-annual convention of the Holy Name society of Orange county at Fullerton tomorrow afternoon.

ORANGE COUNTY CATHOLICS TO MEET SUNDAY

Commemorating the mission of St. Patrick, begun in Ireland 1500 years ago, plans have been completed for the semi-annual convention of the Holy Name society of Orange county, according to an announcement by Leo I. Farry, of Los Angeles, executive secretary. The meeting will start at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow, with the Rev. Mortimer Murphy, pastor of St. Mary's church in Fullerton as host.

The guest of honor will be the Rev. Michael O'Gorman, diocesan director of the Holy Name society, and pastor of Holy Cross church, Los Angeles, and active leader in the Holy Name movement in Southern California for more than 10 years. O'Brien is a graduate of Harvard college and law school, and he was formerly secretary of the California Petroleum corporation.

Among the priests who will attend are Rev. F. A. Wickenham and Rev. T. B. Noonan, of Santa Ana; Rev. P. Browne and E. Hannan, of Orange; Rev. L. P. Genest, of Huntington Beach; Rev. P. J. Beary, of Newport-Balboa; Rev. St. John O'Sullivan, of Capistrano; Rev. T. J. Lehan, of Laguna Beach.

Missionary zeal as exemplified by St. Patrick will be the theme of the convention. "Charged with the task of promoting reverence for the second commandment of God, the Holy Name Society is not a reform movement," explained the Rev. Father Wickenham. "Rather by personal sanctification of its members and their good example does the society hope to bring others to a realization of the honor and respect due to the name of Jesus Christ, the Savior of the world. It is outstanding in the Catholic church in the United States, and it embraces over two and a half millions of men and youths, who, by the bond of common ideals, are linked in spiritual fraternity with millions of other members throughout the universe. In Southern California, the Holy Name Society has been especially favored by the Most Rev. John J. Cantwell, Bishop of Los Angeles and San Diego. Among its lay leaders are P. H. O'Neil, well known financier; the Hon. W. T. Aggeler and W. J. Desmond, judges of the superior court in Los Angeles county; and Major J. Henry Dockweiler."

INTEREST IN CARRIER RAGE AT HOT POINT

Voting in The Register Carrier Popularity Contest during the past week has steadily increased according to a check just made. R. M. Conklin, circulation manager, in charge of the carriers' race, said today.

Determined that their subscribers and friends are going to name them "The Most Popular Carrier," 63 city and 65 suburban carriers are battling for supremacy in their respective groups. With one taking the lead one day and another the next, the contest which at this point is only half over, is still anyone's race.

Increased momentum is expected during the remainder of the contest as many carriers have announced their intention to work doubly hard during the next 20 days to take the lead.

This standing today of both contests is listed below:

Church Societies

First Presbyterian
That Thanksgiving should follow so closely upon the Golden Jubilee anniversary of the First Presbyterian Aid society, helped to make the celebration of that event even more impressive when the members assembled at the church last Tuesday afternoon.

Large baskets of golden chrysanthemums and old time gowns and colonial costumes combined to make an interesting and colorful background. Mrs. S. A. Jones, president, opened the business session. Mrs. Elizabeth Clark, wearing an old lace shirt with much charm and dignity, conducted devotionals. Taking "Light" as her topic, she began by showing an old lamp and as she brought her talk to the present electric bulb, showed a collection of lamps, among them a spirit lamp, olive oil candelabra, old candle molds and the early kerosene lamp.

Mrs. C. H. Braid, Mrs. W. W. Anderson and Mrs. Clyde Bach had searched the records for the important data which was written into continuity by Mrs. J. W. Hancock, who in colonial costume and wig told the story of the 50 years, adding bits of humor culled from the records. In present as their names were read, past presidents appeared in history's album, while the story of their leadership was told. For those who had passed away, a vase of red roses was placed in the frame. Past presidents who participated in the present were: Medames J. R. Medlock, the first president; W. W. Anderson, R. J. Bice, I. Heathman, H. J. Forke, A. W. Ames, Charles Kendall, E. L. Morrison, J. H. Goodwin, W. Sprout, C. H. Baird, G. B. Darnell, Clyde Bach, Cynthia Davis, J. R. Moore and Mrs. S. A. Jones.

Mrs. J. W. Bishop and Mrs. Nat Brown were represented by the roses which later were presented to Mrs. J. R. Moore and Miss Harriet Whidden in memory of their mothers. Mrs. Ward, who had been treasurer for 15 years, and Mrs. Whidden who had given 15 years of service as secretary.

Mrs. E. J. Bice also was presented with a bouquet in recognition of special service. It was under her regime that the work of the Missionary and Aid societies was divided into the present plan. Mrs. Hancock concluded her narrative with the scriptural quotation "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord and to sing praises unto His name." Members singing "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow." The program was closed with solos of Thanksgiving sung by Cecile Fross Willets and Sally Lee Scates, each accompanied by Miss Ruth Armstrong at the piano. A social hour followed during the serving of refreshments by the section leaders. Medames G. B. Lieve, E. C. McKinstry, B. R. Day, M. S. Leach. The members had generously responded to the request for groceries for relief work and a table was heaped with donations to be used for Thanksgiving Joy.

SHEARER STILL HAS SAME DRESS ROOM

During the 10 years she has been in pictures, Norma Shearer has used but one dressing room. And the other day she told me that "It has just had its first thorough cleaning." Robert Montgomery once played seven parts in a Faversham play in New York. And was paid five dollars a week for each part. Before he took to the stage, for which he now is famous, Cliff Edwards used to be a trap drummer in an orchestra. All of which might explain several things.

ORANGE PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McClellan, West Vista avenue, entertained with a dinner Thursday. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Johnson and daughter, Beverly Ann; Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Holly and daughter, Margaret, of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. McClellan and children, Virginia, Junior and Sparks, and Mr. and Mrs. Billy Cross, of Costa Mesa; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cook and son and daughter, Everett and Maxine, of Fullerton; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sparks, of Anaheim, and Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Nemets, of Orange.

Mrs. Flora B. Johnson, of Handay street, is visiting her brother in Santa Barbara.

SIR HARRY LAUDER AND HIS ENTERTAINERS COMING HERE

Sir Harry Lauder is returning to Santa Ana. There are few men of note in this country, whose arrival in this city would be greeted with more genuine enthusiasm than this genial little Scot whose former appearances in programs at the high school auditorium have won him a definite place in Santa Ana hearts. Announcement that he and his company of talented entertainers would be presented on Thursday night, December 1, augurs well for the joys of a Christmas season following such an auspicious opening of the month.

There are special reasons why Sir Harry Lauder is to be introduced. Twenty-five percent of the receipts will go to the fund, it is announced. Those who have heard him before, in his inimitable songs and character impersonations, will double the welcome accorded him. (If there be such in Santa Ana) will be doubly anxious to do so at this time. For it has been truly said "There is but one Harry Lauder."

More details regarding the rescue Thursday afternoon of a duck hunter, who was bogged in the mud in the upper end of Newport Bay were revealed today with the locating of two brothers, Howard O. and C. Ray Straw, of 1609 North Main street, who rescued the man.

The hunter was W. J. Carlson, of Los Angeles, who with his wife and six-year old son went to the bay to shoot ducks with a borrowed shotgun. When he became mired, he yelled for help, but his wife could not drive the car and was helpless to aid him until the Straw brothers happened to drive within hailing distance.

With the aid of boards, they were able to bring Carlson out of the mud. He was mired in over his waist and was rapidly sinking in deeper, until his life was in danger.

Sights of Southern Africa Described By Mrs. Nau

Ad address descriptive of spots visited during a trip to South Africa made several years ago by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Nau was amplified by pictures of the places described, when Mrs. Nau spoke before the Third Travel section of Euclid lounge last night. The occasion was guest night, the meeting being transferred from an afternoon to an evening hour in order to accommodate members wishing to bring friends to the lecture.

A large number shared the meeting, enjoying Mrs. Nau's picturesque description of her experiences in a portion of Africa south the Zambezi river; her impressions of Victoria Falls, her exhibit of an African drum of the type beaten continuously through five and six hours at native dances in the heart of Africa; and her display of pitchers and cups carved from wood by the natives, and of a child's coat fashioned of gazelle skins, all brought from Africa by the Santa Ana traveler. The views projected by Harry Lewis, also were the possession of Mrs. Nau.

The program was appropriately augmented with a vocal rendition of an African piece, sung by Mrs. Leslie Steffensen, accompanied by Miss Mame Havens. In deference to the recent Thanksgiving holiday Miss Barbara Jones sang a number entitled "Father, We Thank Thee," also accompanied by Miss Havens.

Mrs. C. P. Boyer, leader, presented the entertainers and invited members and guests to remain following the program for a refreshment period.

ETHEL BARRYMORE
LOVER OF MUSIC

Ethel Barrymore probably never will satisfy her one great ambition—to be a musician. Since she was a small girl, that has been her one outstanding aim. At nine years of age she played several piano selections with the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra. And she has mastered seven grand opera roles. But still she can't persuade anyone to cast her in anything but dramas.

MUSIC~LITERATURE~ART

GERMAN MUSICAL ACTIVITIES

By RUTH ANDREWS

During recent months, music has undergone a cruel period of testing, along with all other forms of art reflecting man's inherent love for beauty. Staggering beneath their respective economic difficulties, the nations of the world have relinquished many of the luxuries treasured in times of ease.

In those countries where music is still a luxury, a mere surface refinement, it has been slashed from financial budgets to the detriment of culture! In other lands, crushed even closer to earth by adversity and poverty, music still remains to gladden the hearts of the people, valued as a prime necessity, a sustenance and an inspiration.

Germany, the birthplace of so many immortal composers, of countless true music-lovers, still remains a land where music is one of the few phases of popular life upon which recent hardship has not left its imprint. While practically every other country has been forced to curtail its musical plans this season, to darken opera houses and theaters, and to disband many major musical organizations, the German people have gone on serenely, devising clever plans whereby their national music need not suffer during this world crisis.

At the beginning of the current season, a manifesto was issued by the General German Music Society, which has been active in Germany for nearly a century, warning the governments of all the German states, the members of the Diet and the various municipal administrations, against the present tendency to financial retrenchment in regard to music.

"Even in spite of hardships occasioned by the present crisis, measures of public economy should not be allowed to injure artistic development, thus robbing the life of the people of its real soul," the society emphasized.

In a splendid spirit of co-operation, principal musical institutions and agencies in Berlin, including the opera house, the radio companies, and the concert managers, quickly united in establishing a bureau of mediation, to which concert schedules have been submitted, in order to eliminate duplications and clashes in dates and avoid expensive competition. Through this new plan both economy and artistic unity are being furthered.

Co-operation is also making the best of symphonic music available.

NEW CHORAL GROUP PLANS CONCERT

Weekly rehearsals have been under way for the past two months preparatory to a novel concert program which is to be offered during the first week of January by Santa Ana's new women's chorus, the Cadman Choral club. The impending concert, which is to be given in the Ebell clubhouse, will mark the initial public appearance of the new group, for which an important place is anticipated among this community's major musical organizations.

Recently reorganized from the personnel composing the former choral group, the Ebell club, which during several seasons past enjoyed the esteem of music lovers of this section, the new ensemble has named as its honorary president, Charles Wakefield Cadman, internationally noted Southern California composer, who is deeply interested in the success of the new choral club, and who plans to be present at its premier public appearance.

Many prominent Southland musicians are listed as honorary members of the new Cadman circles. Blechschmidt will on this occasion make his premiere appearance with the choral club, which has been directed during the past 30 years by J. B. Poulsen, who recently retired from active musical life.

Blechschmidt has only recently returned from San Francisco, where he acted as co-conductor during the late grand opera season staged at the new Memorial Opera house in the northern city.

Philharmonic "Pop" Concert
Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra's regular popular Sunday afternoon concert, to be given in Philharmonic auditorium tomorrow.

How will include Handel's "Water Music," Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, and Harling's Chansons Populaires.

Albert Spalding, one of the most eminent of American violin virtuosos, will appear as soloist at the orchestra's pair of symphony concerts set for Thursday evening and Friday afternoon, December 1 and 2, and will play Mozart's D Major Concerto and a Poeme by Chausson.

Musical Film Series
Plans are under way whereby the Fox Film company will produce a series of musical films this season, in some of which John Boles of former "Desert Song" fame, will be featured.

LONG BEACH

Clokey Organ Recital

Joseph Clokey, one of Southern California's outstanding musical figures, and formerly in charge of the organ department at Pomona college, from which post he is now enjoying a year's leave of absence, will appear in a joint organ recital with Dudley Warner Fitch at the First Congregational church in Long Beach, on Monday evening, November 28.

In addition to his activities in the field of organ work, Clokey is a composer of note, many of his works having been featured by the local Contando club on their choral programs during recent seasons.

EAST

Open Benefit Festival

A series of five gigantic festival concerts which are to be held in Madison Square Garden in New York City this season, will open tonight, November 26, in elaborate style. These festival programs are to be staged for the benefit of the Musicians' Emergency Aid, which is endeavoring to aid many needy musicians in the East, and which is sponsoring the series in conjunction with the National Broadcasting company.

A picked orchestra of 175 musicians will participate in these outstanding festival events, with Dr. Walter Damrosch, one of America's outstanding musical figures, conducting three of the concerts, and many distinguished artists appearing as soloists. This will mark Damrosch's first definite return to the concert stage in the role of conductor since the 1923-24 season.

Last on the list of newly discovered recipes is a simple dessert. This is Grape Pudding and the quantity serves six.

GRAPE PUDDING
1/2 package lemon jelly powder
1 cup boiling water
1 pound seedless white grapes
1/2 cup heavy cream, whipped
1 tablespoon sugar
Few drops of peppermint essence.

Stir the half-package of jelly powder into the cup of boiling water and when it has cooled pour it over the grapes, previously stemmed, washed, and placed in a small cup. Stand in the refrigerator until the jelly is firm, unmould and serve with whipped cream flavored with a tiny bit of peppermint.

Lime jelly powder makes a better dessert than lemon in my estimation. Have you ever tried a Lime Marshmallow Whip? Not a marshmallow in the thing, just a texture like one.

Prepare the jelly after directions on package, when cool and jelly under way beat to a froth with the egg beater, then fold in a big cupful of whipped cream and chill for several hours. This is nice served with a custard sauce.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Salmon in Oil

Required number of salmon slices
1 cup olive oil
1 cup medium vinegar
4 cloves garlic
Salt, pepper and cayenne to taste.

In this case do not use a substitute for the olive oil, the flavor has a lot to do with the dish. This is an ideal way to cook those baby salmon now in the market; they are too small for canning, nice to look at, easy on the pocketbook, but a snare and delusion if you don't know how to cook them. They are so lean they need extra amounts of fat and careful temperatures in cooking.

Arrange the salmon slices in a large pan, mix the oil, vinegar, and seasonings and pour over the fish slices, (leave the garlic buds intact). Simmer very, very slowly for an hour in this sauce, then carefully pour it off, increase the heat and cook the fish until it begins to brown.

In a small saucepan re-heat the sauce and when the salmon is nice and brown pour the sauce over the fish and send to table.

A slice of salmon—a small slice—cooked in this sauce, has a caloric value of close to 400.

If by any chance any of this fish survives the meal, strip off the skin and mince fine. Put making a sandwich filling mix it with a little tart mayonnaise and spread it on rye bread.

Today sees the close of our free offer on the current leaflet.

BOOK REVIEWS

By MARY BURKE KING

The West is Still Wild, by Harry Carr, published by Houghton-Mifflin company.

"Old Mother Mexico" did not prove particularly interesting to me, therefore the more credit to "The West is Still Wild," for it probably had a bit of prejudice left from the other book to overcome. The difference may be that whereas "The West is Still Wild" has more about people, the interest in "Old Mother Mexico" was much centered about difficult places with the people brought in more as incidents of travel than they are in "The West is Still Wild."

Mr. Carr, in this book, says that he went to Naco, just below the Arizona copper town of Bisbee, to await a Mexican revolution that he knew in advance was coming. "I can smell a war," he says, "as a hound puppy smells liver."

Therefore, he went down there to be on hand when it broke, and after it was over he toured around a bit and tells us about his discoveries. "There wasn't much that we didn't see in the West or in California before we got home—from the Indians to Hoover Dam, from lost prehistoric cities to the lovely ranches and the missions of California from the Spaniards left on Morro Rock by the Spanish conquistadores to the Bret Hart country of California." The inspiration for this journey came from a contact with an Apache who he says made him understand that there was still a great deal to discover in the west.

Flowering Wilderness, by John Galsworthy, published by Scribner's.

In "Maid in Waiting," Mr. Galsworthy got hold of a real character which he has developed to full stature in "Flowering Wilderness." Dinny Cherrell is the central figure in both books. In "Maid in Waiting," the author had gotten hold of a young girl, late return to the "family," of modern comedy fame. But he didn't just know what to do with her.

In "Flowering Wilderness" he has done something interesting with her. He has placed her at a crossroads between an old and a new viewpoint. A callow young flapper would not have been aware of the modern of the older viewpoint. But Dinny is a real character. It has been a fault of the modern creations of so many of the writers that they have been false to reality, because that their characters have been hollow. They have not had roots. They have gone pell-mell into the new viewpoint and exhausted that. Dinny has roots in her family, her father and mother, her Uncle Adrian, Hilary, Sir Lawrence, she has a social heritage through her relationship with them which she cannot disregard when she falls in love with Wilfred Desert, who recanted his faith when confronted by a fanatic Bowdoin in Arabia. Religion meant nothing to him, therefore, as he expressed it to Michael: "My whole soul revolts against dying for a gesture that I don't believe in."

On the other hand we have the tradition of the past expounded to Dinny through her father, the General, Sir Lawrence, Adrian, and Hilary. "Flowering Wilderness" will be a pleasant surprise to those who were disappointed with "Maid in Waiting."

Au revoir until Monday ANN MEREDITH

The once was confined to an introduction to the card system in use in the public libraries.

Those who have not filled similar gaps in their education will find "Making the Most of Books" a boon, for they can, without confession, quietly harvest its information.

The fore part of the book is devoted to the art of reading, and is not unlike Plinkin's "The Art of Rapid Reading," though broader in its scope.

Book Notes....

It is all done without mirrors, but Diplomats who appears as the author of the detective story, "The Corpse on the White House Lawn," is really Jay Franklin, the satirical political writer, and Jay Franklin is really John Carter, the economist and John Carter is really John Franklin Carter, formerly in the State Department at Washington. Anyway he is a young man who was once on a New York newspaper, and is now busily engaged in forming a new political party and writing under his various pseudonyms.

Probably would only happen once in a life time, but I never in my school days, except once, was introduced to the method of using a library, the methods by which information is indexed and filed, and the ways and means of getting at it, as well as what information is stored for reference.

Claremont To Present Pirate Play

Not every boy in these days gets the opportunity to sail to a desert island to hunt pirate treasure, nor would every boy know how to do so if he had the chance! Not so, Prestridge Elington, Claremont school boy, who is the envy of his class. He has been cast as Jim Hawkins in the Claremont Community Players production of "Treasure Island," the most thrilling story ever written about pirates. Prestridge will have a chance to bring to life again one of the many memorable characters in Stevenson's book others including Long John Silver, Captain Bill Bones, Doctor Livesey, Blind Pew, Israel Hands, and Black Dog.

Colorful sets are being designed and built by Fred Orin Harris, Technical director of the Players, and here Prestridge makes himself useful. Because he knows "Treasure Island" from cover to cover, he knows what the schooner "Hispaniola" looks like; he knows the Admiral Benbow Inn as though he, instead of Jim Hawkins, had lived there; and he does not need Plinkin's cross on the map of Treasure Island to tell him where the treasure is buried.

If anyone forgets a line or gives a wrong cue in rehearsal, "Jim" can correct him, so well does he know his book. He could well substitute for almost any character of the play, and probably would do so if he were not so invaluable in his own part. Young Jim Hawkins is one of the most important characters in "Treasure Island," appearing in almost every one of the 12 scenes.

"Treasure Island" is expected to draw large crowds, not only of students but also of men and women who have known and loved the book as children and who want to renew acquaintance with old friends. Matinees have been set aside for children, although anyone may attend. The play will be given on the evenings of December 2, and 3, 9, and 10, with matinees on December 3 and 10. December 2, the opening night, has been designated "Members' Night."

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

STEWARDSHIP OF MONEY

Text: Mark 1:16-20; Acts 26:12-19

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Nov. 27.
By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist

While this lesson on the stewardship of money, which is the stewardship of life, should be first, because if the life is right in its elemental motives and purposes all else should follow. A man who has consecrated his life to a high or holy cause will not be found wanting in the consecration of his possessions.

But it means a great deal to consecrate one's life to a cause—more than most of us realize. We are all born into certain environments, and with many of us these environments determine at least the outward circumstances of our lives. We are thrown into a particular way of living or into a particular business, and the thought of that particular position is full of adventures, if not of disrupting circumstances.

In some, the spirit of adventure lies deep. The things that bind them to the ordinary routine of life and the relationships of family and community are slight, or they are even bonds that chafe and that are quickly and rudely broken.

It is interesting to study the types of people who heard the call and followed Jesus. It was a very exacting call. It is true that he suggested to some who would follow him that they ought to go and attend to the duties at home, but those whom he welcomed into the inner circle of discipleship were as definitely taken out of their ordinary environment.

When the disciple said, "We have left all and followed Thee," he was speaking the literal truth, for it was nothing less than this that Jesus had commanded.

The interesting thing is that among these disciples we find, apparently, both types of people—both the adventurous spirits, ambitious and ready for anything, whose renunciation of everything to follow Jesus meant an intense wrench in their lives, something that they could only have accepted after the most conscientious thought.

Religion needs both types today, and Christian consecration in its ultimate nature and its effect means much the same for both. The significance of Jesus is to open up for all a world of new vision, of new visions that are to be realized either in the routine of one's daily life or work, or in the inspiring challenge of hard tasks.

The fishermen whom Jesus called to leave their nets and become fishers of men were accepting hard tasks in lowly life. Paul called to be a world missionary was accepting an adventurous and very dangerous career—acquiring the course of which was literally shaped by the persecutions that assailed him.

But the disciples were in both cases the same, and the inspiration and strength were derived from the same source—loyalty to the Master and the consciousness of the Master's presence and help.

If we could all come face to face with Jesus as these early disciples came, if we could feel the charm and inspiration of His presence, perhaps the consecration that is difficult would be easier, perhaps we would respond eagerly and quickly like Peter and James and John, perhaps we would respond to the vision like Paul, or we might turn away sorrowful, thinking of our possessions and of the things, great or small, that we should find it so hard to abandon.

Yet, no man ever lost in the joy and glory of life who lost himself in consecration to Christ.

DR. HELMS TO FILL PULPIT AT M. E. CHURCH

Dr. Elmer E. Helms, former pastor of the First Methodist church of Los Angeles, the largest Methodist church in the world, will speak at both services tomorrow and will be the speaker at special evening services each night next week.

At the morning service Dr. Helms' topic will be "The Amazing Story of a Book." In the evening he will talk on "Our Job." This service is planned especially for men and young people. He will speak every night next week, at the First Methodist church.

Dr. Helms is considered as one of the outstanding religious workers, writers and lecturers of the nation and is listed in Who's Who in America for his achievements.

With a great career behind him, Dr. Helms came to Los Angeles in 1920 as pastor of the First Methodist church of that city. It was during his pastorate there that he built and financed the new First Methodist church of the city, now the largest in the world, at a total cost of $1,500,000. He is also a trustee of the Tubercular Sanitarium of Los Angeles.

His career as an author dates back to 1893 when he wrote "That Young Man." FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KING

The mountain goat walked cautiously and was as careful as could be. "It surely is sure-footed," exclaimed Scouty, with a smile.

"If we keep moving on I guess that we'll soon be out of this mess. The bottom of the mountain doesn't look more than a mile."

"That's where you're wrong," said Windy. "Say, I've once traveled round this way and distance really fools you. It is more like three miles, son."

"But, if we all can hang on tight, I think that things will turn out right. 'Course, in the meantime, traveling like this is far from fun."

It wasn't long until the goat brought lumps to every Tiny's throat. It walked near to a spot where all the bunch could gaze below.

The goat's foot slipped a little bit, which might have been the end of it. Another foot, though, stopped the goat. "Was well it traveled slow."

Soon Duncy said, "I see some smoke. If we reach that 'twill make us choke. Just look! It's right ahead of us. The goat seems frightened, too."

"Let's urge it on until we know if it is really safe to go on down the mountain side. I know not what else we can do."

The goat obeyed his kind com-raised his hand and said, "It's a volcano. It's erupting, sure."

THIS DEMOCRATIC ROOSEVELT

Being the Life Story of President-Elect Frank Delano Roosevelt

By Leland M. Ross and Allan W. Grobin

(This intimate story of the life of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, beginning with the time his father took him as a 5-year-old to call on his close friend, Grover Cleveland, then President of the United States, carries the reader through an interesting boyhood on the family farm at Hyde Park, N. Y., his student days at Groton, Harvard and Columbia Law School, and the development of his political career, which began with a New York state senatorship. This biography is entirely authentic. The preceding installment told how F. D., when Assistant Secretary of the Navy, went to the battle front in Europe in July 1918, on a tour of inspection. One of his chief interests was the laying of 100,000 mines in three parallel rows 100 miles long from Scotland to Norway to end the U-boat menace. The British had been skeptical until a German submarine hit one of the mines in the first row to be laid and was sent to the bottom with all hands.)

INSTALLMENT ELEVEN

With hearty co-operation from the Allied navies, work was launched on the second row; and by November the third "line of death" was being drawn across the North Sea. A similar barrier was laid across the narrows of the English Channel; and when Franklin D. Roosevelt went to Rome early in August as the agent of the Allied governments, to confer with the Italian naval officials he called attention to the importance of stopping the passage of Austrian submarines through the Adriatic Sea.

This time his suggestion met with immediate appreciation, and the Manchester Guardian said of his plan:

"What Mr. Roosevelt says about special naval measures to keep the Mediterranean clear of submarines is very welcome. Four campaigns depend wholly or partially on sea communications in the Mediterranean. The French, Italian, Salonika and Palestine campaigns. He speaks of closing the Adriatic to Austrian submarines. That, if it can be done, would dispose of the enemies' chief bases.

American mine-laying craft, under F. D.'s direct control, played the leading part in locking up the Adriatic and thus repeating there the "miracle" of the North Sea. The effectiveness of the new mines was astonishing.

While work on the second row in the North Sea was still in progress it became known that other German U-boats came to grief on the first barrier. . . . It was believed that the submarine menace was at least really under control. But it was not until after the Armistice that the full significance of the project was revealed. Not until American naval officers went to the German bases themselves did the full import of that three-ply barrier and its sister barriers in the English Channel and the Adriatic Sea become known.

German submarines, up to the time the first row was laid, had had free access to and from German bases through the North Sea. They had known a barrage was being laid but had given it little serious thought. It was not until three submarines in quick succession touched the deadly antenne that the Germans awoke. And that awakening constituted a sudden realization that their U-boat ace had been trumped. The British surface mines had been one thing. . . . this American barrier was an entirely different thing! The chances were ten to one against their getting safely through the sunken "line of death."

Then and there began a weakening of morale in the German submarine crews. Eventually, they decided to take their ships out at all. . . . It was the first mutiny that had occurred in the German fleet. But it spread from the submarines to the High Seas Fleet and from there to the army. And a week after it reached the Army, Germany was asking for an armistice!

Undoubtedly historians will record the important part that Franklin D. Roosevelt played in beating the German U-boat; that his long-headed understanding of that essential strategy and his persistence in getting it adopted were major factors in the final failure of the Kaiser's war.

After his visit to the North Sea, Roosevelt inspected the Grand Fleet in the Firth of Forth and the patrol of the coast of France. He visited the huge American naval bases at St. Nazaire, Brest and Queenstown. In these tours of the bases, he took care that the improvements made in French ports to receive American soldiers should be made with a view to future use by France's people.

"They will benefit from such work," he said, "and that will be at least one silver lining to the clouds of war."

During all his stay in Europe he did not sleep two successive nights in the same place. He arrived on the scene learned what he wanted to know, completed his reports and hurried on to the next inspection.

Throughout this whirlwind of activity, he showed officials abroad that he was an expert on warfare. His advice, his strategic suggestions were not confined to submarine barriers. He was almost miraculously familiar with the details of his job.

When he sailed for New York in mid-September, he told British authorities that he hoped to return in the near future. "Perhaps in uniform," he added significantly.

While returning from abroad, F. D. caught Spanish influenza and was taken to his mother's home in New York, adjoining his own. Pneumonia followed and three weeks were lost. The moment he was able to leave his bed, however, he was back in the little square office, contributing his bit toward winning the war.

And the moment he arrived in Washington he asked for a commission in order that he might supervise the operations of the "big guns" on the Western front. But the war was over in another week, November 11, the Armistice was signed.

There is one very important part of Franklin D. Roosevelt's life about which he has never fully spoken. That part is Alfred Emanuel Smith. Probably no one can write of the now famous "Al and Frank" relationship with complete authority. But the biographer of Roosevelt, bent seriously upon presenting a fundamentally complete picture, cannot ignore the true meanings of that relationship.

Prior to the trip to France on the destroyer, Assistant Secretary Roosevelt had been drawn once more into New York politics. The state was preparing to elect a governor.

Tammany was in a difficult situation. Boss Charles F. Murphy had been scared in 1911 when Sheehan lost the senatorship. He had been frightened in 1912 at Baltimore; and had lost ground when Wilson had come into the Presidency over his opposition. Moreover, the Republicans had resumed control of the state and were planning to re-elect Governor Charles S. Whitman who had already served two terms.

Murphy knew what he needed—a strong candidate able effectively to challenge Whitman.

Alfred E. Smith suggested

Franklin D. Roosevelt. "He's the one man who can beat Whitman," said Smith. "He has the Wilson prestige. He has a live reputation in this state for independence and democracy." They smiled ironically in remembrance of the Sheehan fight, the Dutchess re-election battle, the Baltimore convention and the U. S. senatorial primary of 1913.

Tammany's leaders were not, however, seeking a friend to whom to deliver a juicy political plum. They wanted a candidate who could muster strength. They had to have him. And Franklin Roosevelt, they believed, was the one man who could help them.

Hence, shortly before F. D. departed for Europe on the destroyer, various up-state Democratic leaders and "Tom" Smith, secretary of Tammany Hall, appeared in Washington. New York's Democracy, they told him, wanted him as its candidate for governor.

Naturally Roosevelt was pleased—as any man would have been pleased by similar honor. Perhaps, too, he was a little surprised by Boss Murphy's proffered support! But he said: "I cannot desert my post. . . . The nation is at war. . . . I would like to run; but duty impels me to decline."

The envoys from New York were deeply disappointed. Whitman's chances for a third term were alarmingly enhanced by F. D.'s obvious determination not to be a candidate. But there was no appeal from such an answer. "Whom do you think we should nominate?" they asked; and their dismay at his own refusal was eloquently expressed in their tone.

Roosevelt considered. Indeed who was the man? . . . Through his mind marched the events of the past decade. And the men. One incident stood out: Assemblyman Smith advising the Sheehan bolters—

"But if your serious about this fight, keep your hands clean and stay out of the caucus. Then you're free agents."

. . . Smith had been his foe; Smith had been fair; Smith had told the whole truth.

In the years that had followed 1911, he had seen Smith as majority leader make his fights for social reform, for factory workmen's compensation, woman suffrage, in industry, labor legislation. As speaker of the Assembly the same constructive effort. It smacked of statesmanship, unselfish and real.

Nor had he been the only one to notice it. F. D. remembered. A leading Republican of his acquaintance had told him on one occasion, "Frank, that man Smith and the younger crowd with him represent a new spirit in Tammany."

And after that legislative career, Roosevelt had seen Smith go as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1915 to win the approval of such Republicans as Elihu Root, Henry L. Stimson, and George Wickersham. A man apparently capable of continuous mental growth.

Reviewing these developments, Franklin D. Roosevelt saw in Smith the man to beat Whitman. "I think," he told them, "that Alfred E. Smith is the best man to nominate; and I think he can be elected."

"He's a practical statesman. He doesn't ask for the moon; but is content to get what he can. And he fights on the people's side."

The leaders were skeptical. Smith, as sheriff of New York county and president of the Board of Aldermen, had been a popular public figure.

But he was a Catholic.

It was a "Republican year" . . . under circumstances it would be difficult—if not impossible—to overcome the "religious issue."

To Roosevelt's advice was added the ringing endorsement of President Wilson:

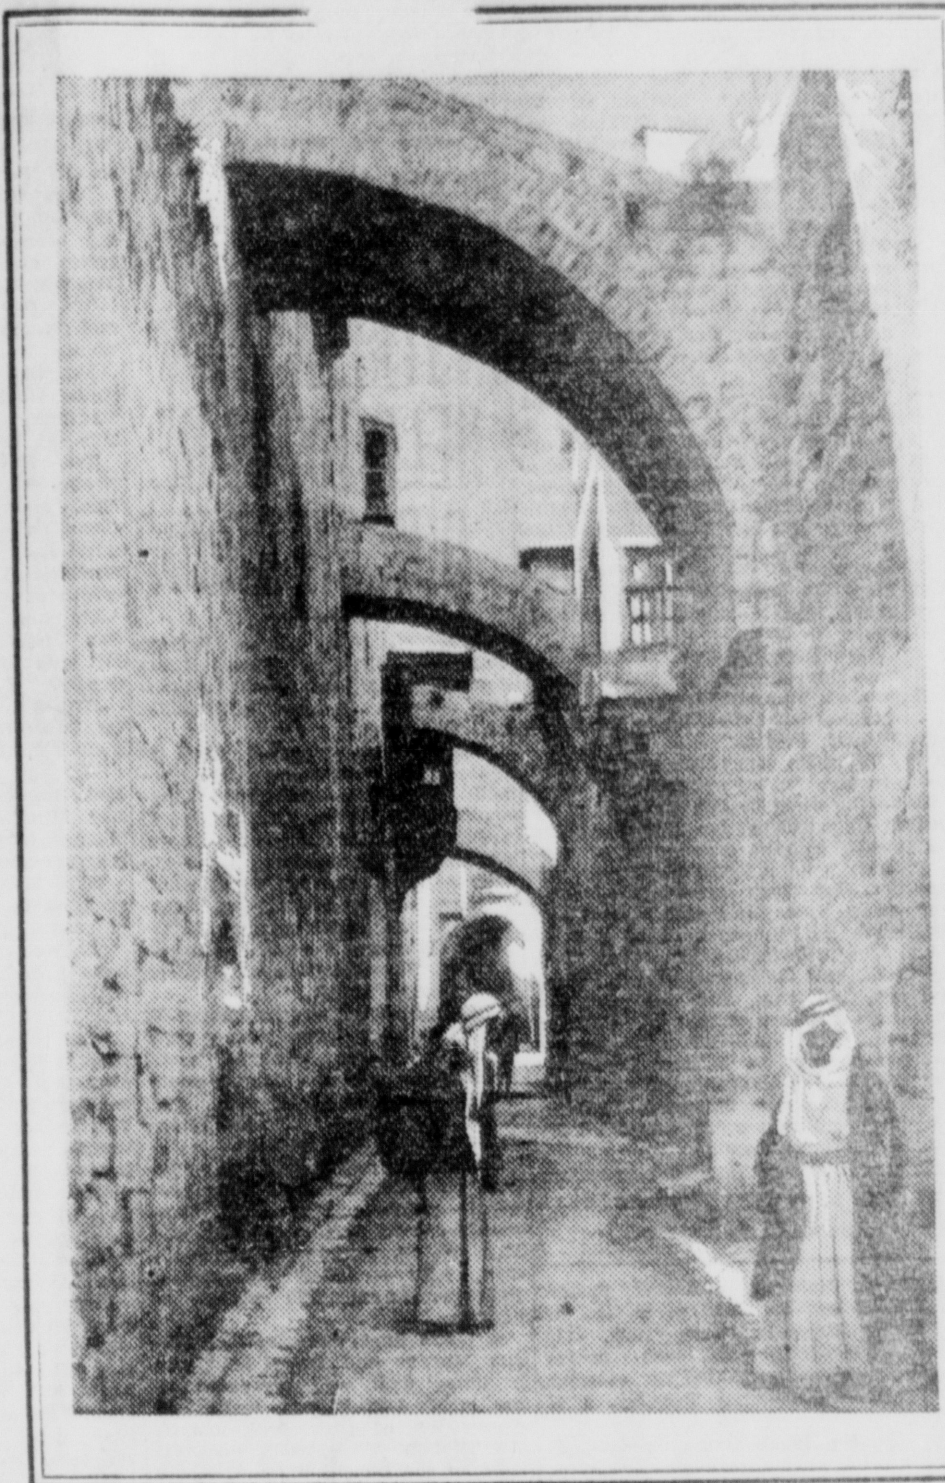

"I've been watching Alfred E. Smith for several years. He is a man apart. He is progressive and has qualities of statesmanship. He would make a capable executive of the State of New York."

The Empire State leaders were impressed. They returned with the "news" to New York and Murphy . . . to consider their problems once more.

COME to CHURCH

Palestine, Jerusalem. A recent photograph of Via Dolorosa — the street through which Christ carried the Cross on the day of the Crucifixion, and which multitudes have traveled the world over to see.

WITH a prayer on His lips and benevolence in His heart, He died on the Cross, only to be returned to mankind. That His spirit has lived ever on, worshipped by all nations is our greatest proof of the greatness of His soul. In worshipping Him we may bring to ourselves the Peace and Eternal blessedness which He brought to mankind, and perpetuated in the Church.

HARVARD'S RETIRING PRESIDENT

President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University has announced his retirement at the close of the academic year. Our oldest American university is naturally a national institution, and the retirement of its president is an event of national importance. At the time of his retirement he will have served the university for 25 years.

President Lowell followed the most distinguished president that Harvard University has had in all its long and honorable history. It was no easy task to fill the place of a man who had come to be known as the country's most distinguished private citizen, for President Charles W. Eliot had become that. Yet the writer of the history of Harvard University will place the name of Lowell but little below that of Eliot among its long line of distinguished leaders. The work of the two men was along different lines. President Eliot was primarily an educator. President Lowell was primarily an administrator. Yet each was not without distinction in the sphere in which the other excelled. President Eliot revolutionized the curriculum of the university. President Lowell developed extensively the graduate schools. It was through him that the Graduate School of Business Administration was established, lifting business administration to a profession like teaching, medicine and law. Another great contribution made by President Lowell was the housing system of the student. It was under his leadership that the Freshman house plan was begun, which is now being adopted by all American colleges. He also established group houses, which is also becoming an accepted system among the colleges.

President Lowell came up to his position from the legal profession. This probably accounts for a markedly different attitude toward public affairs from that held by President Eliot, who came to his position as a life-long educator. It is with some regret that we recall his opposition to the confirmation of Louis Brandeis when he was nominated for Justice of the United States Supreme court, which President Eliot heartily endorsed. And his decision on the Sacco-Vanzetti case will always be held against him by passionate lovers of justice. Yet he has stood ever for academic freedom. He refused to bow to the clamor for the removal of Prof. Munsterberg in the days of the war hysteria, and for the removal of Harold J. Laski when he took the unpopular side on the Boston Police strike. The latter incident, it will be recalled, brought Calvin Coolidge into national prominence, and ultimately to the presidency of the United States.

The period covered by President Lowell's administration will stand out as one which marked the greatest material growth of the university. His successor will have two great leaders to follow. It will not be an easy task. Still Harvard has a distinguished alumni, and the material to choose from is rich.

Mr. Hoover apparently sees no need to ask for a recount.

HOW THE FOREIGN DEBTS WERE CONTRACTED

It is quite necessary that a campaign of education should be started to give the American people the true inwardness of the foreign debt problem, which President Hoover is now facing, and which Congress will soon have to consider. It is all well enough, as one leading financial writer said recently, for politicians to open their mouths and close their minds; but the question is not to be settled in that way. An open default would have serious consequences here and abroad. Yet, that is what thoughtless politicians and the American people are inviting by an uncompromising attitude.

Prof. Harold G. Moulton of the Brookings Institution has shown how all that has thus far been paid on the debts has been paid out of loans made by the United States, and that the entire foreign debt is not worth as much to the American people in dollars as a prosperous Europe is a customer. It has been pointed out that the collection of custom duties alone on a restored foreign trade would bring in $300,000,000, which is $20,000,000 more than the installments due this fiscal year on the foreign debts. The economists also point out that an increase of one per cent in our annual income over the present low levels would amount to twice the amount of the annual installments.

A writer in the New York Times of November 27 reveals the fact that the post-armistice loans, amounting to three and a quarter billions of dollars, were made to protect American interests. He quotes a letter written to President Wilson by Mr. Hoover in 1918, then national food controller, that the cancellation of orders for food necessities by the British government after the armistice would lead to a debacle in the American markets, and a financial crisis. To meet this situation, President Wilson made additional loans to foreign governments for the purpose of postponing a post-war deflation.

Outright cancellation would find very few advocates in this country; but a thorough re-examination and study of the whole question, with a moratorium, until the completion of such a study, is a reasonable and a practical policy to be pursued. And the sooner the American public is educated to that point of view, the sooner shall we move on to a higher scale of economic prosperity. The whole question at present is a disturbing factor in the unsettled situation in the economic world.

FURTHER SUGGESTIONS ON THANKSGIVING GAME

Last evening we discussed the matter of the preparations by the Fullerton police for emergencies of trouble by the two junior colleges in their Thanksgiving day game. Information has come to us a little more fully in relation to it since, and we would wish to emphasize that this intense rivalry which has led to trouble, has not been between the junior colleges, as it has been between the other school forces.

We cannot condemn, in the light of the facts, the Fullerton police officers for the precaution they used, even though if they had investigated further, they probably would have found that the difficulties which had caused them to be on their guard, did not apply in the case of the junior colleges.

The junior college student body, through their own activities, had taken this up with the students, and undoubtedly the students had had the matter so laid before them that there was not the remotest danger of anything out of the way occurring. And for this, the student body leaders deserve praise.

It is exceedingly unfortunate that this intense rivalry, going down into personalities, should prevail. And we do insist that if the condition is such that those who are charged with the responsibility of keeping the peace, feel that it is necessary for them to make such preparations as these, the sport should cease. In fact, this fear certainly would bring before those responsible for these untoward events, the seriousness of their own actions.

Many times difficulties which arise on such occasions are not among students themselves, but among the spectators, who find themselves less able to control their spirits and temper than are the students. Those of us who are not students, owe it to the great body of our students to keep possession of ourselves to the end that we do not bring disrespect upon the students.

SHE SHOULD KNOW WHICH SHE PREFERS

It seems that one woman has discovered what to do with your brothers-in-law. If time and tide hold out, marry them all. This a woman of Los Angeles has done in swift and rapid succession, after each divorce.

The young woman is named Harryette H. Post who married three Tarr brothers. It is the case of being well-tarred and re-tarred, and strange to say, the mother-in-law in each case, expressed herself as well satisfied with the bride.

It seems that this Tarring episode must cease, as she has married the last Tarr in this particular family. The mother-in-law says that she is a lovely girl. She has probably been getting better during these various marriages, and probably the mother considers her almost one of the family now. All of them are very friendly, and who the joke is on is yet to appear.

Sweep of the Hurricane
Pomona Progress-Bulletin

It would be hard to think of a more laborious job than the one Rex Brasher finished not long ago.

Brasher set out, more than 40 years ago, to compile an exhaustive reference work on American birds. He wanted to get into a book pictures of every kind of bird found in the United States; colored pictures which would be as exact in tone and design as the most painstaking study could make them.

After an incredible amount of travel and hard work, he did what he set out to do, and completed a 12-volume set containing paintings of more than 1200 birds. Then he wanted to get his work on the market—and learned that it would be utterly impossible for the most advanced four-color printing process to reproduce the fine shadings of his paintings as they ought to be reproduced.

An even passable reproduction of the 12 volumes, he was told, would cost around half a million dollars; and even then it would not be really satisfactory. So Brasher set out to copy his plates by hand for an edition of 100 copies.

When you stop to figure out the amount of sheer drudgery involved in painting 1200 pictures of birds, and then multiply that by 100, you can begin to get a faint idea of the nature of the task this man set himself.

Well, he finished it a month or so ago; and you would imagine that he drew a great breath of relief to get this toilsome 40-year job off his hands. But he didn't. Instead, he felt that the actual completion of his work was the most tragic thing that ever happened to him.

"The hardest jolt was when I found I was 'through,' he said.

You would have to hunt a long time to find a better illustration of the way native enthusiasm can turn hard work into fun.

That is a secret most of us never discover. We feel sorry for ourselves because we are overworked—and forget that whether we are overworked depends entirely on how much we like our jobs. The man who is doing something he really likes to do can't ever get too much of it.

The Handshaking Nation
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

If the President of the United States were privileged to insert an amendment of his very own into the Constitution it would be one against the wish, habit and distribution of handshaking. It is the bugaboo of all Presidents and has grown to such an alarming extent as to threaten hand and arm injury to the target of the handshaking army.

Some statisticians should figure the power concealed within the American habit of shaking hands and reckon it back to us in kilowatt hours or whatever. We should be given something of an idea of the power we are wasting. When we concentrate that nationwide habit on Presidents and governors we are practicing a smiling inquisition on them. It doesn't mean a thing to us but it means stark torture to them. But they don't dare to break up the silly practice and we refuse to show the least compassion.

Perhaps, if we could realize the futility of the general practice, we could bring ourselves into a national frame of mind that would have a heart in the direction of Presidents et al. who need relief.

BIRDS IN THEIR LITTLE NESTS
(A True Story)

The bluebird found his bird house
Well suited to his needs;
He knew no rest until a nest
He'd built with twigs and weeds.
But long before his lady
A single egg had laid,
A sparrow flew the portal through
And THERE his haven made.

He labored with his helmet
To brighten the abode
With bits of straw and string they saw
Upon the neighboring road.
But as they labored bravely
To deck their habitat,
A nut-batch came and eyed the same
And cried, "Get out of that!"

For days and days he hammered
With unremitting din
To lift the door an inch or more
So that he might get in.
His raucous voice he lifted
In hoarse and strident song,
But while he eyed his work with pride
A flicker came along.

Today this master pirate
Still bravely holds the fort,
But I believe he soon will grieve
Because HIS shift is short.
You think that birds are gentle
And never disagree,
But live for song, yet you are wrong;
They're much like you and me.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

THE SCAPEGOAT FOR TAXES

Yesterday I admitted and recorded the fact that since 1923 the tax draft on national income has risen dramatically from 11 per cent to 33 per cent.

Who is to blame?
Modern Americans are just as seditious as the ancient Hebrews in looking for a scapegoat.

Who is the scapegoat for American taxes?

Certain taxpayers alliances in many of our states would have us believe that the scapegoats are the administrators of the scientific, social, and educational enterprises of government.

Is this true?
Yesterday I suggested that the tax draft on national income has shot upward from 11 to 33 per cent in four years not because public expenditures have risen so rapidly but because national income has fallen so rapidly.

I am quite aware that this does not remove the fact that a 33 per cent draft on national income is a serious matter with which political, social and economic leadership must wrestle.

It does suggest, however, that the blame for the large proportion of the national income now going into taxes cannot be justly placed on the shoulders of social and educational leadership.

The blame must, to a very material degree, be placed squarely on the shoulders of the economic leadership that proved incapable of steering our economic ship past the shoals of depression.

It is interesting to watch businessmen on the governing boards of the various scientific, social, and educational enterprises of government.

They talk loudly of the necessity of balancing budgets.

They demand that, if local, state or national income is down a given per cent, the expenditures of the scientific, social, and educational enterprises of government must come down that per cent.

It seems never to occur to them that they, the administrators of the nation's business, are more responsible than the administrators of the social projects of government, are to blame.

Let's keep our scapegoats straight!

BY THE BOOK

Teachers who write and preach as much as I do ought to be the last, perhaps, to warn readers and listeners against the book but my experience forces me to caution conscientious people against accepting my word in child training as the last and perfect one. There is no such thing.

Every child is an individual and peculiar combination of forces. When a doctor or a teacher, a child specialist of any sort, expresses an opinion or gives a direction, he comes as near the matter as his knowledge and experience will allow. But there is always an uncertain element in the situation. That is the child himself. When we have offered him our best it may not be what he needs. We must always allow for a margin of adjustment between the child and us.

Take the matter of diet. Milk and eggs are fine foods for children. But how much milk? How many eggs? In what form? That depends upon the child himself. He may need quarts of milk daily and he may not need so much. He may be able to use an egg a day or one a week. Only the mother or the nurse who is in daily contact with the child can know. She watches and remembers, experiments again and again until she arrives at the answer for what is best.

A mother called her child's physician because, in spite of everything she could do, the little one refused to touch an egg or anything that contained an egg. "Well, don't offer him an egg again. We'll give him something else and try how that works," said the doctor. "But you said I ought to have an egg for his lunch, doctor." "True enough, but if he can't eat eggs we can offer him something he can eat. He can live and thrive if he never eats an egg." That seemed to astonish the young mother. I am certain that after she has reared a family she will know that what is one child's meat is another's poison.

The same idea holds throughout. One child takes his afternoon nap and another refuses to lie down, much less sleep. One child chews without protest and another fights every direction. We can give one child permission to play in the yard and know he will stay there while we dare not allow his brother out of sight lest
